O God, when I have food,
help me to remember the hungry;
When I have work,
help me to remember the jobless;
When I have a home,
help me to remember those who have no home at all;
When I am without pain,
help me to remember those who suffer,
And remembering, help me to destroy my complacency;
bestir my compassion, and be concerned enough to help;
By word and deed, those who cry out for
what we take for granted.
Amen

WE ARE ALL EVANGELIZERS

(AND WHATEVER ELSE IS ON DEACON ERIC'S MIND)

Good News, Maybe Not – Go Figure

Here's some news that doesn't sound good to people of faith in our country:

"A sharp decline in U.S. adults' religiosity during the past decade is among the most dramatic drops recorded by Gallup in any country over any 10-year period", the pollster reported Thursday.

Gallup found that the share of Americans who say religion is an important part of their daily life went from 66% to 49% between 2015 and 2025. A 17-point shift is rare, according to Gallup — only 14 out of more than 160 countries in its World Poll dropped more than 15 points in a 10-year time-frame."

So what does this mean? I'm not sure, I was hoping you might, but we'll get back to it shortly.

Moments after first reading this Gallup news I read this in my daily news feed (Catholic Vote):

"Young people come to New York City to chase careers, materialism and pleasure. The pursuit of faith isn't exactly on the Big Apple checklist. However, at a recent, very crowded Sunday night mass at St. Joseph's Church in Greenwich Village, Father Jonah Teller, OP made a simple announcement indicating that times are changing.

According to Teller, the number enrolled in the parish's Order of Christian Initiation of Adults — the process in which adults convert to Catholicism — had tripled since last year, with roughly 130 people signing up."

So in a matter of two minutes, I'm told that the nation, as a whole is turning away from all religion, not just Christianity, at an unprecedented rate. At the same time, Catholicism is rapidly drawing converts in a city most of us would not identify with Christianity, let alone Catholicism. How can each of these stories be true at the same time?

Well, first of all the Gallup statements are very broad and there's not enough data given in the article to make any independent analysis. Secondly, the New York City article, which does have other examples of great Catholicism growth, focuses on a singular subset over a shorter period of time and this juxtaposition of these articles only seem to contradict. It's more of a "comparing apples and oranges" type of situation.

What got me thinking, however, was how viewing only one of those two news articles might leave a false impression on the state of religion in our country. The Gallup numbers might leave the reader with a negative view, while the New York story would certainly be encouraging to Catholics, it would not be to non Catholics.

So this all leads us back to the title of this piece "Good News, Maybe Not – Go Figure." I'll take the good news and run with it – the largest city in our country is seeing substantial growth in converts to Catholicism. It shows that our directive from the Church to go out and spread the Good News of Jesus Christ is at work. Hope is alive there and as we know, "Hope does not disappoint." I have no time for the Maybe Nots--go figure.
